

EDITORIAL

THIS is a special issue in memory of Tom Harrisson, former Government Ethnologist and Curator of the Sarawak Museum. That this is the third journal with which I am acquainted to publish a memorial issue for Tom indicates to some extent his perceived stature in Borneo and Southeast Asian studies. (The other two journals are the Journal of the Malaysian Branch Royal Asiatic Society and the Borneo Research Bulletin.)

Tom was a controversial person and he will no doubt continue to be controversial for some time. Without doubt he focused a considerable amount of international attention first on Sarawak and then more widely on Borneo as a whole. Archaeologically his major field contributions in Sarawak had to do with his work in the Niah Caves and at Santubong. I feel that the one fairly critical article I have seen on Tom's work has been mine on his treatment of the Niah archaeology (The Niah research program. JMBRAS 50(1): 28-40; 1977). This should be read in conjunction with Barbara Harrison's article in the same issue (Tom Harrisson's unpublished legacy on Niah. JMBRAS 50(1): 41-51; 1977) which presents a differing viewpoint. Controversy as concerns the Niah research program will probably be active during the next few years.

I have organized this issue to start with a focus on Tom's work and then move outward. The articles making up the second half of the issue are, most of them, less directly concerned with Tom but are on subjects that were of interest to him. His interest had spread to the Pacific the last few years of his life and had he lived longer I suspect we would have had more articles from him involving the Pacific.

Tom's interests and involvements were very wide ranging. Partly as a result of this he often came up with interesting, new ideas. In closing on Tom I would like to call attention to two recent articles of Tom's that expressed thoughts on a new idea of his that I feel is very important and on which, I suspect, we will be focusing research for years to come. These are his papers on the Bajau, listed as 1973-74b and 1976b on pages 17 and 18 of this issue. Life has been less interesting without Tom.

The publication of this volume should mean the completion of twenty years of publication. However, no volume appeared for the year 1965, and Volume IX, which should have been dated 1965, was dated 1966. This volume was the first published by the Social Science Research Institute of the University of Hawaii. In the change from the Hong Kong University Press much time was lost, so we decided to skip a year in our dating in order to catch up to date more quickly. We hope to catch up again on our publication schedule without leaving out a year this time.

We published an index with Volume V. It would obviously be useful to have a new cumulative index, and I would like to work for such an index to cover the first twenty-five volumes of AP. If any of our readers would care to make a comprehensive index for these twenty-five volumes, I would be very happy to hear from such a volunteer. I would appreciate it if any readers particularly knowledgeable about making an index would write to me with specific suggestions on how we might go about it.
